(Washington, D.C.) –The Natural Gas Supply Association (NGSA) issued the following statement in reaction to Senators Manchin and Barrasso introducing the Energy Permitting Reform Act of 2024.

Dena Wiggins, President and CEO of NGSA, said:

“Infrastructure is key to unlocking the many benefits of natural gas and we support the Energy Permitting Reform Act of 2024 as a key step in improving the permitting process.

“As natural gas continues to grow in importance to our nation’s energy system, the economy and our climate goals, having the accompanying investments in infrastructure to match the growth of our energy resources and our energy demand is vital.

“We look forward to working with Senators Manchin and Barrasso as they continue to improve the permitting system in our country.
